ESSAY

3. How can you apply the skills learned in TLE to help your family? (20pts)

Answer

Technology and Livelihood Education (TLE) teaches students valuable practical skills that can be used not only in school but also in everyday life. The lessons I learn in TLE can be very helpful to my family, especially in saving money, improving our daily life, and even starting small income-generating activities. For example, in Home Economics, I learned how to cook simple but nutritious meals. By preparing food at home, we spend less on eating out and eat healthier. I also learned how to sew, so I can fix torn clothes instead of buying new ones. These small actions help our family save money and become more self-reliant. In Information and Communication Technology (ICT), I developed basic computer skills that allow me to help my parents with online tasks, such as paying bills, sending emails, or even creating documents. I can also teach my younger siblings how to safely use the internet and learn online. These skills are very useful in today's digital world. If I choose to study Agriculture or Industrial Arts, I can apply what I learn by growing vegetables in our backyard or fixing things at home like broken furniture or electrical problems. This not only saves money.
